Oak Creek Village Recreation Report 08/11/2020

Aquatic Management replaced a GFCI receptacle in the pump room. Invoice submitted for $376. They will also be submitting an invoice for fixing one of the toilets and the lights in the women's bathroom.

Adult lap swim is continuing weekday mornings from 6:30 am – 7:30 am. The pool will close on weekdays as of 8/16 and be open to residents on weekends only until 9/27.

Cudas swim practice took a break for the month of July, but plan to resume practice on 8/17. Practice will be M-F from 4:30 PM until 6:00 PM and Saturday morning from 7:30 AM until 9:00 AM. If sufficient registration is received, we will continue practice through October 10th.

There are 2 cracks that have developed in the deep end of the swimming pool. Aquatic Management does not feel they are an immediate problem, but we will need to have the pool resurfaced sooner than I expected. We should plan to have it done this winter. I will begin collecting quotes for the work.

What's New At The Pearl Fincher Museum Of Fine Arts

The Pearl Fincher Museum of Fine Arts is delighted to announce its Fall 2020 exhibitions, which open September 19.

Idyllic Times: Selections from the Gary T. Leach Collection of American Art will be featured in the Main Gallery, along with Vistas and Voyages: The Photography of Don Pine in the Rebecca Cole Gallery.

Born and raised in Des Moines, Iowa, Gary T. Leach says his passion for art collecting did not come naturally. Though he was never in want of anything, fine art was not an item in the budget for his humble, midwestern family. He graduated from Iowa State University and moved to Texas to begin a career in construction. Twenty years later he traveled to Europe for the first time and noticed the many oil paintings in the hotel club. One painting in particular caught his eye, and became his first purchase of an original oil. Idyllic Times features 30 pieces from his wonderful collection, which call to mind the simple moments that make life beautiful.

Landscape and nature photographer Don Pine is a native Texan who has been involved in photography all his life. His father was a WWII Marine Corps photographer, and under his tutelage Don first witnessed the magic of watching images emerge in a home darkroom. Boy Scout campouts, tours of duty with the Navy in Japan and the Far East, and a six-week trip across Europe after graduate school instilled a desire to experience beautiful places throughout the world, and Don has now traveled to all seven continents and 74 countries. Vistas and Voyages showcases Don's ability to create portraits that capture the personality of both animals and people, and grand landscapes that cause us to marvel at the magnificence of God's creation.

Both exhibitions open Saturday, September 19, 2020 and continue through January 9, 2021. Located at 6815 Cypresswood Drive in Spring, the Pearl Fincher Museum of Fine Arts is open 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday. Admission is free. Donations are appreciated and help continue the Pearl's mission of art, education, and community.

River Otters By Cheryl Conley

Most people assume that the animal they are seeing in area lakes and streams is a beaver but it could be a river otter. Most people don't realize that we have otters in our area.

River otters are fascinating little creatures. They are semi-aquatic spending about two-thirds of their time on land and the other third in the water. They live in dens called holts, near water, that have several tunnel openings with at least one leading them directly to a lake, stream, inland wetland or marsh. Their webbed feet and powerful tails make them strong swimmers. When they're in the water, their nostrils and ears close to keep water out. They have a third eyelid, or nictitating membrane, that acts like the goggles we wear when we swim. It protects the eyes and helps them to see underwater. They can dive up to 60 feet and can hold their breath for up to eight minutes.

The diet of the river otter is mainly made up of aquatic organisms including fish, turtles, frogs, crayfish, etc. but since they're semi-aquatic, they've also been known to eat small mammals like squirrels and mice.

River otters are good communicators and have a variety of vocalizations. They yelp, whistle, growl and chirp and when threatened, they emit a scream that can be heard up to a mile and a half away!

Although they live alone or in pairs, river otters are very social and playful—guess you could call them party animals. The playful furballs roll down hills, juggle pebbles, wrestle, frolic in the water and even build themselves slides along the banks of rivers.

If you need assistance with an injured, orphaned or displaced animal, give us a call. In most cases, the animal doesn't need rescuing but we will help you make that determination. If the animal does need help, we will walk you through the process to keep both you and the animal safe. Our phone number is

Magnificent Milkweed of Mercer Botanic Gardens

Milkweeds are a genus of perennial, flowering plants in the Asclepias family known for producing a milky substance that protects them from predators. Its Latin name, coined in 1753 by Carl Linnaeus, a Swedish botanist, zoologist, and physician, comes from Asclepius, the Greek god of healing.

Milkweeds are an essential source of nectar for pollinators, including bees, butterflies, wasps, and other nectar-seeking insects. They are also the larval food source for monarch butterflies and a variety of other insects, including some beetles and moths. More than 200 species of milkweed grow throughout Africa and the Americas.

Although tropical milkweed, also known as Mexican butterfly weed, is native to the tropics, it grows in parts of the southern United States. Unfortunately, when grown outside its native range, the showy ornamental has been linked to Ophryocystis elektroscirrha (OE), a protozoan parasite that interferes with a monarch's ability to migrate, mate, and fly.

Unlike most milkweeds native to the United States, tropical milkweed does not die back in the winter, which allows the parasites to live on the plant indefinitely. Parasite populations are usually kept in check when the infected plant goes dormant in winter, killing the parasite. Thus, some experts suggest cutting back tropical milkweed each year to prevent the spread of OE. Despite the risks of OE, some gardeners leave tropical milkweed in place to feed non-migrating butterflies. As a safe alternative, gardeners can grow native shore or aquatic milkweed, which often stays green year-round.

The festival kicks off Saturday, Oct. 3. There will be a pre-sale and discounts available for members of The Mercer Society, so join or renew your membership today.
